Aristide Flees Amid Chaos

Supreme Court justice assumes power; U.S. sends Marines

PONT-AU-PRINCE, HAITI | President Jean-Bertrand Aristide resigned and flew into exile Sunday, pressured by foreign governments and a bloody rebellion. Gunfire crackled as the capital fell into chaos, and Washington dispatched Marines.

The Marines were expected to arrive Sunday night, a U.S. official said, and France also said it was sending troops. They would be the vanguard of a multinational force that the United Nations Security Council met to consider later Sunday.

Three hours after Aristide's departure,

Supreme Court Justice Boniface Alexandre declared at a news conference that he was taking over as called for by the constitution.

"The task will not be an easy one," said Alexandre. "Haiti is in crisis. ... It needs all its sons and daughters. No one should take justice into their own hands."

But anarchy reigned in Port-au-Prince after word spread of the president's departure. Angry supporters roamed the streets armed with old rifles, pistols, machetes and sticks. Inmates were freed from the National Penitentiary; looters emptied a police station and hit pharmacies, supermarkets and other businesses. The violence ebbed after police moved in during the afternoon.

There were conflicting reports on where the ex-president would go. Aristide's jet refueled on the island of Antigua and was en route to South Africa, government and airport officials in that Caribbean country said. But officials in Johannesburg said there had been no recent contact with Aristide nor an offer of asylum. PAISLEY DODDS (AP)

CHANGES | It Once Was Lost ... After the serial disappearance of its road signs, one village's identity has been, well, lost. Exasperated at constant plundering by souvenir hunters, residents of Lost — population, less than two dozen — have changed the Scottish hamlet's name to Lost Farm. At least five road signs have disappeared in recent years from the village. The longest any sign lasted was three months, officials said — and one vanished after only a day. (AP) EyeOpeners | Page 2

Barbie Measures Up

Barbie is getting kicked out of school. Math teacher Laurie Reitz was using the plastic fantastic babe to teach her seventh-grade students about proportions. She instructed the Concord, Mich., middle-schoolers to take Barbie's measurements. Then the kids were to compare Barbie's dimensions to those of a family member or to Reitz herself. But some parents complained the assignment was too sexual in nature. School officials have now banished Barbie, but they decided not to discipline Reitz. (AP)

No Clomping Zone

If there was any question about the Dutch heritage of Holland, Mich., consider that it's now OK to have a cell phone in the city library—but not wooden shoes. The Herrick District Library Board voted Thursday to reverse its ban on cell phones, while deciding to keep the traditional Dutch shoes off-limits. "We do get a lot of traffic [in wooden shoes] coming through here, but it's only during Tulip Time," library spokesman Gary Pullano told The Holland Sentinel. The annual weeklong Tulip Time festival—planned for May—celebrates the area's Dutch roots. Library director Tom Genson said that in the past, staff members had to tell patrons to remove the shoes when they made too much noise. A similar policy has been adopted for loud cell-phone use, officials said. (AP)

Disguise Disaster

A man wearing a fake mustache that might have been made from construction paper got away with robbing a Bank of Albuquerque branch in New Mexico's capital city of an undisclosed amount of money on Friday. Ladies Love Clay Figurines

Nothing ushers in feelings of l'amour quite like these little guys, right ladies? Well, if you were in Romania, they might. The clay figurines called Martisor, pictured here in Bucharest on Sunday, are part of a tradition stretching back more than 2,000 years in the Balkans region. Men traditionally give out the pagan-inspired charms to lady friends on March 1. They're meant to mark the beginning of spring and symbolize good cheer and hopes for love and happiness. (AP)

The center, to be announced April 23 at a scientific conference, could be the largest privately funded American stem cell research project to date, the Boston Sunday Globe reported. Edwards Targets Kerry During Debate

N.C. senator comes out swinging ahead of Super Tuesday contests

NEW YORK | Democratic presidential underdog John Edwards dismissed John Kerry's ideas as "the same old Washington talk" in a feisty debate Sunday, two days before the 10-state slate of contests known as Super Tuesday.

Edwards shed his congenial style and delivered his toughest critique yet of the Democratic front-runner. He said Kerry voted for bad trade agreements and that his proposals would "drive us deeper and deeper into deficit."

In a swipe back at the freshman senator from North Carolina, Kerry, a 19-year-Senate veteran, said the country needs a president with experience and "proven ability to be able to stand up and take on tough fights."

Polls show Edwards trailing in all the states that vote on Tuesday, Democratic presidential hopeful Sen. John Edwards of North Carolina smiles during a campaign stop at Long Island University in New York on Sunday. Earlier in the day, he sparred with party front-runner John Kerry over trade and budget proposals.

and he faces increasing pressure to bow out if he can't turn it around. He rejected the suggestion that he was angling to become vice president.

The hourlong debate, also featuring Al Sharpton of New York and Ohio Rep. Dennis Kucinich, came two days before voters in 10 states award 1,151 pledged convention delegates — more than half the 2,162 needed to win the Democratic presidential nomination.

Of the 10 contests, Edwards has virtually ceded the four New England states to Kerry and stands little chance of victory in the biggest battlegrounds, New York and California, or in Maryland. That leaves Georgia, Ohio, Minnesota as his targets — and polls show him trailing in those states. NEDRA PICKLER (AP)

Study: Fewer Bloggers Than Expected

NEW YORK | Despite the potential of turning every Internet user into a publisher, relatively few have created Web journals called blogs and even fewer do so with regularly, a new study finds.

The Pew Internet and American Life Project, in a study released

Charges Filed Against Missing Family's Relative

Cousin's arrest adds twist to disappearance of couple and their son

TAYLORSVILLE, MISS. | A relative of a family of three who disappeared on Valentine's Day was charged Sunday with a drug and firearms violation, and authorities said other charges were expected.

Authorities have not said whether they believe Michael and Rebecca Hargon and their 4-year-old son, James Patrick, are still alive. Blood and spent bullet casings were discovered at the family's home in Yazoo County.

Earnest Lee Hargon, an adopted cousin of Michael Hargon, was charged with a single count of possession of methamphetamines while also in possession of a firearm. The firearm is an AR-15 assault rifle, which Strain said could be converted into an automatic weapon.

"As a result of recent developments, that's all that we are going to charge him with today. We fully anticipate filing additional charges," State Highway Patrol spokesman Warren Strain said at a news conference.

Hargon

The drug and firearm charge was filed in southern Mississippi's Smith County, where Earnest Hargon and his wife live on 160 acres.

Strain said possible evidence was found Saturday at Hargon's property but would not elaborate. About 50 officers continued searching the wooded property Sunday, using dogs, helicopters, backhoes and all-terrain vehicles. MATT VOLZ (AP)

Clergy Resignations Urged

Bishops 'totally failed' in handling sex abuse, Catholic leader says

A prominent lay Roman Catholic who oversaw a church-sanctioned report on how clergy sex abuse pervaded the American church said Sunday that bishops who sheltered guilty priests should resign.

Robert Bennett, a Washington attorney, said in an appearance on NBC's "Meet the Press" that some bishops had recognized the gravity of the problem early on and disciplined offenders, but many more did not.

Asked if churchmen who did not protect children should step down, he said, "I think the answer to the question is yes. There are bishops who have totally failed as pastors and as shepherds of their flock."

Cardinal Theodore McCarrick of Washington argued that bishops often acted on bad advice from therapists, who pronounced many of the errant clergy rehabilitated and fit for ministry.

Bishops now recognize they must remove all offenders from church work, McCarrick said.

Bennett is a member of the National Review Board, a lay watchdog panel formed by U.S. bishops at the height of the abuse crisis.

On Friday, the panel released two reports the bishops had commissioned on the molestation problem from 1950-2002.

The first study, by the John Jay College of Criminal Justice, was an unprecedented nationwide accounting of accused priests. That survey found 4 percent of priests who served over the last half-century had been accused of abusing 10,667 minors.

The second report was the board's own investigation into how the crisis occurred. The panel laid much of the blame on bishops, saying they too easily forgave molester priests and were insensitive to victims.

Report: L.A. Police Shoot at Drivers Despite Policies

LOS ANGELES | Police officers in Los Angeles have shot at motorists more than 100 times since 1985, killing 25 people and injuring at least 30, despite a department policy that discourages firing on drivers, The Los Angeles Times reported Sunday.

The department's policy manual states that firing at moving vehicles "is generally prohibited" because it is "rarely effective and is extremely hazardous to innocent persons."

But the practice has continued at a steady rate, with officers firing at motorists an average of six times a year, according to police records analyzed by the Times.

In 90 percent of the more than 100 cases reviewed by the newspaper, officers were reprimanded or ordered to undergo retraining for errors that led to the shootings. In about 60 percent of the cases, police officials concluded the shootings were justified.

Such shootings have come under renewed scrutiny after three police officers killed a suspected burglar at the end of a chase last week when his car moved slowly toward them. (AP)

A Day of Mixed Emotions

Pro-Aristide militants seek revenge for ouster as opponents rejoice

PORT-AU-PRINCE | Sunday dawned with a hush around Haiti's deserted National Palace, an almost tangible sense of the power vacuum as Haitians realized President Jean-Bertrand Aristide had finally left.

It was a brief calm — a moment of hope for Aristide's opponents — until furious Aristide supporters unleashed their anger, shooting into the crowds and blanketing the city in flames and gunfire.

By noon, pro-Aristide militants, known as chimères, were shooting to kill. On the main John Brown Boulevard, men with shotguns left behind the bullet-riddled bodies of three men inside an SUV.

Bodies — often with their heads partially blown away — were seen in several neighborhoods.

The violence subsided in the late afternoon as police stepped up their patrols. But in the Aristide stronghold of Lasaline, a slum on the outskirts of the city, his supporters continued to seethe over his ouster.

"It's a violation of our constitution," said James Voltaire, 28, a fervent Aristide supporter. "We had a president who was elected for five years." MARK STEVENSON (AP)

'Untainted' Jurist Takes Over Amid Strife in Haiti

Supreme Court justice with reputation for honesty assumes helm

PORT-AU-PRINCE | Supreme Court Chief Justice Boniface Alexandre, who announced Sunday that he was taking charge after President Jean-Bertrand Aristide resigned, is a longtime jurist with a reputation for honesty in a notoriously corrupt system.

He was raised by his uncle, former Prime Minister Martial Celestin, and represented the French Embassy for 25 years as a lawyer. He joined the Court of Appeals in the late 1980s and became one of the 12 supreme court members in 1990. He was appointed chief justice about a decade later.

Alexandre, who is in his 60s, declared three hours after Aristide fled the country that he was taking charge of the country. The Haitian constitution dictates that parliament approve Alexandre, however. The legislature has not met since early this year when lawmakers' terms expired.

Alexandre urged calm after more than three weeks of violence in the Caribbean nation of 8 million people. (AP)

An Unfortunate, Lasting Legacy

PORT-AU-PRINCE, HAITI | The sudden departure of Jean-Bertrand Aristide, the country's first freely elected president in its 200 years of independence, was almost predictable in a nation that has seen more than 30 coups d'état.

Over time, leading Haiti has been a terrible career choice. One president was poisoned, one was blown up in his palace, one was dismembered by a mob, nine fled and six were overthrown.

At the end of the day, the former priest may have gotten off cheaply. When Jean-Claude "Baby Doc" Duvalier was thrown out in 1986, impoverished looters ran wild, stripping his mansion of everything, including copper pipes and plumbing fixtures. JOSEPH B. FRAZIER (AP)

Reports Vary After Poles Fire on Bus

Polish general in Iraq says terrorist targeted, not Shiite pilgrims

KARBALA, IRAQ | Polish soldiers opened fire on a bus full of Shiite Muslim pilgrims from Iran after it failed to stop at a checkpoint Sunday, witnesses said. Ten people were hurt, including eight Iranian pilgrims, they said.

But Gen. Mieczyslaw Bieniek, the commander of Polish forces in Iraq, insisted the bus was empty except for the driver, whom he described as "a lone terrorist who might have had explosive materials."

The bus, apparently having brake troubles, struck a minivan and swerved into a concrete barrier at a checkpoint manned by Polish and Iraqi security forces, witnesses said. Abbas Hassan, a member of the U.S.-trained Iraqi Civil Defense Corps, said Polish troops opened up with heavy firepower for several minutes, targeting all cars coming in on the highway from Baghdad. He said the gunfire destroyed the right side of the bus.

Shiite Muslims are traveling to Karbala, 50 miles south of Baghdad, for the 10-day festival of Ashoura, which is expected to draw 1.5 million pilgrims, including about 100,000 Iranian Shiites. The festival marks the death of one of the Shiites' chief saints, Imam Hussein, a grandson of the prophet Muhammad. TAREK AL-ISSAWI (AP)

184 Missing After Ferry Explosion in Philippines

MARIVELES, PHILIPPINES | The Muslim extremist group Abu Sayyaf claimed responsibility Sunday for an explosion on a ferry that sparked a fire and left 184 passengers missing, as divers failed to find any bodies in initial searches of the wreckage.

President Gloria Macapagal Arroyo dismissed Abu Sayyaf's claim that it planted a bomb aboard the Superferry 14 that started Friday's blaze, saying it appeared the group was using the accident as propaganda and to spread fear.

Only one person has been confirmed dead from the fire that swept through the 10,192-ton steel-hulled ferry. Most of the 897 passengers and crew survived by getting into lifeboats or jumping into the sea.

Police intelligence reports have cited the ferries, one of the main forms of travel in the sprawling archipelago, as a potential Abu Sayyaf target.

The Abu Sayyaf, on the U.S. list of terrorist groups, is known for kidnappings, murders, bombings and banditry. OLIVER TEVES (AP)

Pakistanis Decry Shooting Deaths

Troops fire on minibus in border area searched for al Qaeda suspects

ISLAMABAD, PAKISTAN | Opposition politicians walked out of the Senate on Sunday to protest the shooting deaths of 13 people by security forces in a remote tribal region of Pakistan, scene of a recent military operation to nab al Qaeda suspects.

Troops fired on a minibus that failed to stop Saturday at a road-block in South Waziristan, outraging residents and prompting President Gen. Pervez Musharraf to announce an investigation.

The president said Sunday that the government would pay $1,750 in compensation to the families of those killed, an indication the government acknowledged the victims were innocent civilians.

Pakistan's military conducted a counterterrorism operation last week near South Waziristan's main town of Wana. The rugged area near the border with Afghanistan is a possible hiding place of Osama bin Laden, but none of the 25 arrested suspects were believed to be senior al Qaeda figures.

The U.S. military has praised the Pakistani deployment in the tribal areas as part of a "hammer and anvil" effort to trap al Qaeda and Taliban holdouts. MATTHEW PENNINGTON (AP)

Madrid Bomb Plot Foiled, Police Say

MADRID | Bomb-making chemicals discovered by police in a truck driven by a suspected member of the Basque separatist group ETA were intended to explode in Madrid and could have caused a "massacre," Justice Minister Jose Maria Michavila said Sunday.

Police arrested two suspected

ETA members near Canaveras, about 90 miles southeast of Madrid, after finding 1,100 pounds of potassium chloride compound, 66 pounds of dynamite, and 100 yards of core fuse and an electrical detonator in their small truck on Sunday.

It is the second time in two months that authorities said they had foiled an ETA bomb plot targeting Madrid. On Christmas Eve, police found a 55-pound bomb on a train headed to Madrid.

ETA stands for Basque Homeland and Freedom. The group has waged a decades-long, violent struggle for independence of the Basque Country region in northern Spain near France's southwest Pyrenees border. ED MCCOLLOUGH (AP)

Court Puts Brakes on Israeli Wall

One-week suspension ordered as military weighs route options

JERUSALEM | The Israeli Supreme Court on Sunday ordered a one-week halt to construction on a section of the West Bank security barrier where soldiers shot dead two Palestinians during a violent protest last week.

Under intense pressure, including last week's highly publicized hearing about the legality of the barrier at the International Court of Justice in The Hague, Israeli officials had already pledged to change the planned route of the barrier to ease hardships on Palestinians.

The Israeli court on Sunday issued an order to stop work on a section of the barrier being built near Jerusalem while the military considers alternative routes.

Israel insists that the barrier is necessary to keep Palestinian suicide bombers out. Palestinians call it a land grab aimed at preventing them from setting up a state.

IN 1895, PERCIVAL LOWELL SAW THE CHANNELS ON MARS AND THOUGHT THEY WERE CANALS BUILT BY MEN. LITTLE GREEN ONES, PERHAPS.

In the 1870s, when Giovanni Schiaparelli named the features of Mars and drew a detailed map of the planet, it didn't include little green men with ray guns. What it did have though, was a network of channel-like lines, "canali." A word that, in Italian, means channels. But was mistranslated to mean, "canals." Percival Lowell, a respected astronomer, was convinced like many others that if Mars had canals, they must have been built by intelligent beings in order to irrigate a dry planet. Lowell tirelessly pushed the idea in his own books, starting with Mars in 1895, and helped the public's fascination with life on Mars to explode. Right now with the NASA rovers zipping all over its surface, Mars is more in the news than ever. At the National Geographic Museum, you can see how the early scientific observations of the Red Planet kindled popular enchantment with Mars. Have fun with pop culture artifacts. Tanker Survivors Sought in Atlantic

Coast Guard looking for 18 missing crew
members from crash

PORPSMOUTH, VA. | The Coast Guard searched the frigid Atlantic on Sunday for 18 crew members of a tanker that exploded while carrying 3.5 million gallons of ethanol. Three crewmen were known dead and six others were rescued.

The search was suspended at nightfall Sunday. A crew will fly to the area Monday morning, then decide whether to search further, Chief Warrant Officer Gene Maestas said Sunday evening.

"Realistically, the longer the search goes on, the less likely it is that we will find anyone who is still alive," Rear Adm. Sally Brice-O'Hara, commander of the Coast Guard's 5th District, said at a news briefing earlier Sunday.

Two 87-foot Coast Guard patrol boats from Portsmouth and Little Creek, along with a C-130 airplane and an HH-60 helicopter from Elizabeth City, N.C., were conducting the search. The tanker sank about 200 feet to the ocean's bottom, 50 miles off Virginia's Eastern Shore.

vive several hours depending on health and survival gear, Brice-O'Hara said.

Some crew members were sleeping at the time of the explosion Saturday evening and some were on deck, so it's unlikely that they were wearing gear that would protect them from the cold water, Coast Guard officials said.

Va. Man Charged After Dragging Body on I-95

SPRINGFIELD, VA. | A Lorton motorist is facing several charges after police say he hit a man on Interstate 95 and dragged his body 8 1/2 half miles.

Fairfax County Police said Josuel Galdino, 25, of Lorton called them about 6 a.m. Sunday to report a man's body was caught in the front-end suspension of his sport utility vehicle.

"He said he thought he ran somebody over at the interstate and by the way the man is dead, laying in front of his house," said Sophia Grinnan, a police spokeswoman.

Investigators said Fitsum Gebreegziabher, 27, of Woodbridge had got out of his car because of a flat tire near the Fairfax County Parkway. Grinnan said Gebreegziabher was struck and killed, and his body dragged to Galdino's home.

Galdino was charged with manslaughter, driving while intoxicated and felony hit and run. (AP)

longtime Md. Senator

ANNAPOLIS, MD. | Tuesday's U.S. Senate primary in Maryland offers a roster of a dozen candidates but is widely considered a warm-up for a November showdown featuring incumbent Barbara Mikulski, a political dynamo, and E.J. Pipkin, a determined, self-made millionaire.

"At first blush, she looks invulnerable," Maryland pollster Keith Haller said of Mikulski, seeking a

Mikulski Pipkin

Pipkin, 47, still is a relatively new politico, having served only a year in his first public office — the state Senate. But the Republican points out that he won the upper Eastern Shore seat by overthrowing a 24-year incumbent, Democrat Walter Baker.

"He is an aggressive campaigner, and if he's willing to spend some money, it'll at least make for an interesting race," said Patrick Gonzales, whose polling firm found only 30 percent of Marylanders surveyed in October had heard of Pipkin. GRETCHEN PARKER (AP)

A Lovely Day for Woods

World's No. 1 golfer comes back to repeat as Match Play champ

GOLF | Tiger Woods simply has no match.

Spraying his tee shots all over the course, Woods went 25 holes before he finally took the lead Sunday, then roared past Davis Love III with key putts to win the Match Play Championship for the second straight year, 3 and 2.

Woods won for the 40th time on the PGA Tour in just his 149th start, the quickest anyone has reached that milestone.

Woods earned $1.2 million, the biggest prize to date on the PGA Tour, and reminded everyone who's No. 1 in the world.

Even more impressive is his back-to-back victories in the Accenture Match Play Championship, the most unpredictable format in golf because of the five 18-hole matches required to get to the finals.

Woods wasn't nearly dominant as last year. He couldn't find a fairway in the morning session and was lucky to be only one down after the first 18 holes. Love missed several chances in the morning, none more crucial than a 5-foot birdie putt on the par-5 11th at a time he was poised to take a 3-up lead.

His last opportunity came on the same hole in the afternoon. Love had a 4-foot birdie putt to cut the deficit to 2 up, but it rolled around the rim of the cup. Woods closed him out on the 16th hole. DOUG FERGUSON (AP)

Syracuse Shocks Pittsburgh With Upset Road Win

MEN'S COLLEGE BASKETBALL | Gerry McNamara, held scoreless by No. 3 Pittsburgh for the equivalent of nearly a game and a half, hit a go-ahead 3-pointer and two key free throws in overtime and Syracuse ended the Panthers' 40-game home winning streak with a 49-46 upset Sunday.

Hakim Warrick scored 17 points for the defending national champion Orangemen (19-6, 9-5), who stayed in the running for the No. 4 seed in the Big East tournament and damaged Pitt's chances of winning the conference regular-season title.

Pitt (25-3, 11-3) dropped into a first-place tie with Connecticut heading into Tuesday's game at Providence (10-3). ALAN ROBINSON (AP)

BY THE NUMBERS: Before Sunday's loss, Pittsburgh had been 34-0 at home since opening the Petersen Events Center last season and hadn't lost in Pittsburgh since Jan. 12, 2002. (AP)

Hornish Starts Fast With Penske

AUTO RACING | The IRL season opener turned into a Penske shootout, with newcomer Sam Hornish Jr. passing his teammate on the last lap with a surprising inside move to win Sunday's Toyota Indy 300.

The Toyota-powered Marlboro Team Penske cars dominated early but slipped back into the pack as accidents and pit stops shuffled the 19-car field several times.

Hornish took the lead on lap 173 from Tomas Scheckte. Castroneves moved into second place on the next lap and took the lead from his new teammate on lap 176.

Both made their final pit stop on lap 180, along with Dan Wheldon, who took the lead on lap 183. The two Penske drivers quickly tracked down Wheldon, sandwiching him on lap 188.

Hornish led that lap, but Castroneves got past on the inside the next time around, and that's the way it stayed until the two crossed the finish line at the end of lap 199.

President Seeks Steroid Summit

DOPING | President Bush wants to organize a summit of representatives from the major sports leagues and the U.S. Olympic Committee to discuss steroid use by athletes.

Officials at major league baseball, the NFL, NBA, NHL and USOC confirmed Sunday they were contacted by the White House about such a meeting.

The White House had no immediate comment Sunday.

Spokesmen for the NBA and baseball said those sports would participate. NHL spokesman Frank Brown would not say if the league plans to take part.

The USOC said it welcomed a chance to participate.

The Washington Post first reported on the proposed summit Sunday, saying officials from the major sports leagues tentatively agreed to attend the meeting. Citing administration officials, the newspaper reported that there has been resistance to the meeting from the baseball players' union.

Gene Orza, associate general counsel of the union, did not immediately return several calls Sunday. BOB LENTZ (AP)

Entertainment

Back to the Grind

Stephanie Mills hasn't outgrown her old-school R&B

PERSONALITY | A string of hits in the '80s and early '90s qualify her as an R&B icon. But what made Stephanie Mills a household name then is working against her now.

Mills is a still-vital artist ignored by major labels. Why? Because the money-making potential for her type of music — in this case, urban adult contemporary — has been pegged as nil.

With such exceptions as Gerald Levert (Elektra) and recent multiple-Grammy Award winner Luther Vandross (J Records), other "old-school" contemporaries have opted to take the independent route to stay in the game.

Mills is no different. But she has funded her new R&B album, her first in 13 years, herself.

"It's a struggle when you don't have a big machine behind you," the New Jersey-based singer said. "I'm doing this on sheer will, faith and my experience in the business."

Mills initially met with some major-label executives when she began recording the album. But "they said this kind of music just isn't going to sell, and radio wouldn't play a Stephanie Mills song now," the singer recalled.

So as the recording progressed and no takers came to the table, Mills adopted a do-it-yourself approach. The result is the 10-track "Born for This!" on her own label, JM Records.

Calling the experience "educational," Mills quickly learned a few things, like how to scramble up-and-coming producers when the big names got too expensive, and how to whip up an appealing album package and Web site (stephaniemills.com) with help from savvy colleagues.

"It's really been a roll-up-your-sleeves effort," Mills observed. "You definitely have to use some creative thinking."

It was Mills's creative artistry at age 15 that won her the starring role as Dorothy in the Broadway show "The Wiz." She later signed with 20th Century, scoring her first top 10 R&B hit in 1979 with "What Cha Gonna Do With My Lovin'."

From there she segued to Casablanca and then MCA, where she recorded five No. 1 R&B singles, including "I Feel Good All Over" and "Home."

"The hardest part is staying focused, keeping it rolling," the singer said. "There are so many naysayers out there. You have to have tunnel vision, or you'll get sidetracked by others' opinions. If I believed what I've been told, I wouldn't have come this far."

Video rental-store defectors find a new way to look at films

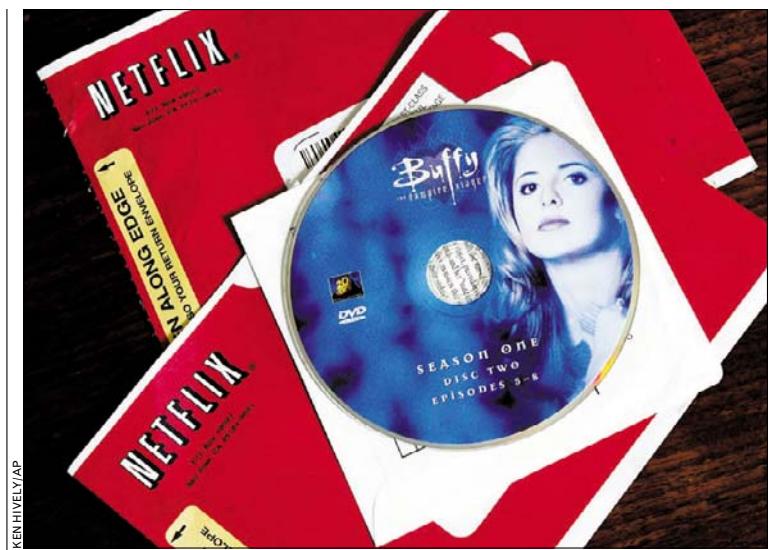

RETAIL | Like many of their friends, the Hogans of Redondo Beach, Calif., subscribe to Netflix, a relatively small online DVD delivery service that has inspired big-time competition and a devoted, almost cult-like, following.

Case in point: As a financially strapped college student, Daniel Block, 26, was once forced to drop Netflix. But he says he signed up again first thing after he found a job and rented an apartment.

Word-of-mouth has helped the Los Gatos, Calif.-based Netflix to grow in five years from zero to 1.5 million subscribers. Most are concentrated in urban and suburban areas, but there are also those in the nation's remote outposts.

"In King Salmon, Alaska, there are 100 registered households. Half of them are our members," recounted Netflix founder Reed Hastings.

By working with filmmakers and distributors directly, Netflix is expanding the market for small independent and foreign films, Hastings claimed. The Oscar-nominated "Daughter From Danang" was not going to be released on DVD until Netflix persuaded a small distributor to put it out.

Netflix has inspired imitators and giant competitors such as Wal-Mart and even Blockbuster, which recently announced it would launch its own version of a movies-by-mail service by the end of the year.

Hastings appears unfazed by competition from the giants. He's confident that ordering movies from home will become the norm relatively soon.

Customers like the library of 15,000 titles, the ease of finding small gems among the standard Hollywood products and the convenience of ordering. Members place their orders on a queue. Depending on availability, Netflix sends out the movie on the top of the list when a subscriber mails back the last one.

Netflix subscriber Brook Stein of Sunnyvale, Calif., says he and his wife, Laurie, ordered some classics, but those quickly fell to the bottom of their queue.

"We put comedies and dramas in there to break things up," said Stein. "I like series, like 'Band of Brothers.' Toward the bottom, there's 'Nicholas Nickleby' and then," he paused, "Darling Buds of May, Vol. I ... I guess my wife put that in there."

Wood's Second Chance

TV MOVIE | Movie stars can gain eternal life from the films they leave behind.

But Natalie Wood, a child actress who became a star, is remembered today less for her performances in such films as "Rebel Without a Cause," "Splendor in the Grass" and "West Side Story" than for her strange, untimely death: She fell off a yacht under murky circumstances and drowned at 43.

A new TV biopic, "The Mystery of Natalie Wood," proposes how it happened and raises another issue: the widespread disregard for Wood's acting skills, both during her lifetime and since.

The film, airing on ABC at 8 p.m. tonight, casts newcomer

Justine Waddell as Wood, the dark-eyed beauty who appeared in more than 50 movies. It is directed by Hollywood veteran Peter Bogdanovich.

Bogdanovich chronicles her life and career exhaustively, embroidering the action with photos and footage of the real-life Natalie. Then comes the fateful weekend when Wood, her husband Robert Wagner and her co-star Christopher Walken, set sail for Catalina Island off the California coast. The events of Nov. 27 to Nov. 29, 1981, occupy a hefty 20 minutes of the film.

Exactly how it happened died with Natalie, but the film draws from the official coroner's report for a depiction that, Bogdanovich says, "was very painful to think about, to write, to shoot." Still, he hopes his film will stir them to take greater notice of the life that went before. FRAZIER MOORE (AP)

Kids' WB Springs Into Live Action

NEW PROGRAMMING | Kids' WB is moving into live-action shows this summer with its first original movie and a hidden-camera prank show called "Gagsters."

The movie, "Zolar," follows a band of semi-pro athletes who discover their newest team member is an alien. It will include cameos from sports stars.

In the fall, the network's Saturday morning schedule will add the previously announced series "The Batman" and an animated program tentatively called "Da Boom Crew," which it calls a "hip-hop sci-fi" series following the "intergalactic adventures of four orphans."

New series on corporate cousin Cartoon Network include "Foster's Home for Imaginary Friends" from Craig McCracken, the creator of the popular "Powerpuff Girls." ELIZABETH JENSEN (LOS ANGELES TIMES)

Craig McCracken's stars will have competition.

ON TV TONIGHT

Bite the apple, and spend the rest of your life being ridiculed in living rooms.

DOESN'T SOUND LIKE EDEN

FOREVER EDEN (9:05 p.m., Fox) Tonight, Fox launches what it calls "an open-ended, unscripted soap opera." A review tape was not available. Here, 11 contestants dwell in a tropical paradise but are called upon to rely on their wits and their sense of good and evil to survive.

BUS OR PLANE?

NOIR REVIVAL

The Trio network deserves congratulations for rummaging through the attic of TV's castoffs to re-discover JOHNNY STACCATO (10:30 p.m., Trio), a 1959 detective series starring John Cassavetes.

Clearly inspired by the success of "Peter Gunn," "Staccato" shares that classic show's jazz-bar setting and doomed film noir atmosphere. But unlike Gunn, which was clearly shot on a set, "Staccato" was filmed in Manhattan, making this show a trove of lost New York locations. Cassavetes brings a memorable neurotic energy to his chain-smoking character. Look for a very young Michael Landon in tonight's episode. Elmer Bernstein wrote the show's gritty, groovy theme.

Q: WHAT COULD MAKE 'YES, DEAR' EVEN DULLER?

TO THE EDITOR

FRIDAY'S STORY about the collapse of the NHL's Pittsburgh Penguins listed several "Seasons to Forget," including the Ottawa Senators 10-70-4 rookie season in 1992-1993 (Feb. 27). The list, however, failed to mention the even worse rookie season of another hockey expansion team that happened much closer to home. The 1974-75 Washington Capitals set the all-time NHL record for fewest wins and fewest points when they went 8-67-5. Maybe it wasn't an oversight; maybe it was just a "Season to Forget," and Express did.

I TAKE ISSUE with the blurb for the Living Colour show, in particular the comment "Vernon Reid is still the only African-American guitar god of note." ("Top Stops," Feb. 26). With all due respect to Mr. Reid, where would rock guitar be today without legends like Charlie Christian, B.B. King or Buddy Guy? And what about the skills of Prince, Robert Cray and Lenny Kravitz? Surely your writer could come up with at least one other "African-American guitar god" ... Jimi Hendrix, perhaps?

'The Passion'

From washingtonpost.com/liveonline

Actress MAIA MORGESTERN was online Friday to discuss the filming of "The Passion of the Christ" and her role as Mary.

With all the controversy surrounding the movie in reference to Judaism, was it morally difficult for you to do this film?

I am Jewish. I found the script beautiful, poetic and very philosophical. I found nothing anti-Semitic from the very first moment when I read the script to the last moment of working on the film. I wouldn't have played it if I had found something not kosher.

How long did the movie take to shoot? I heard it was very cold when filming. Was it difficult?

I'm from Romania, so I can handle bad weather. For me, the shooting took five months. For the other actors, maybe seven months. I never heard anybody complain of anything because we were motivated. We understood from the very beginning that we were part of a great film of pure art.

How was it working with Mel Gibson?

He's a great director. He knows exactly what he wants. He is a wonderful actor and because of this he can understand actors. He always asked about our feelings, our thoughts and our ideas. I think it was wonderful for the film. It was like a cultural exchange.

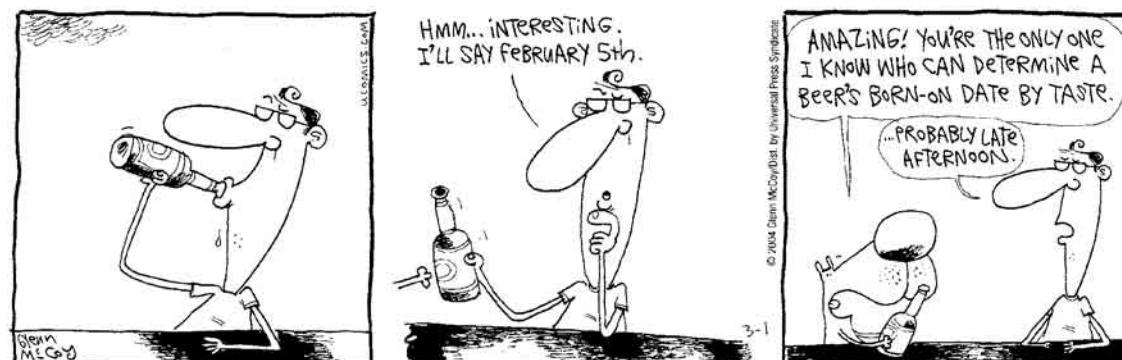

Did you ever anticipate the kind of attention this film is receiving? Did you know it would make so many headlines?

I was hoping that a lot of people would come to see the film. The sad thing is that it is receiving a lot of publicity about being controversial, but I remind people that it is an interpretation of a story performed by actors.
